

CONTRIBUTORS

Victor I. Dyatlov is professor of the Department of World History and International Relations of Irkutsk State University, Russia and Director of the Research Center on Inner Asia (Irkutsk). He published widely on cross-border migrations in modern and late imperial Russia, on the role of ethnic migrations in the formation of settlers communities in the East of Russia and on the comparative study of diasporas.

Aleksandra Łopińska is Ph.D. student in the Institute of Eastern Studies at the Adam Mickiewicz University, Poznań. She holds an MA in international relations from AMU. Her research interests include migration issues, particularly in the North-East Asia, contemporary political situation in the Russian Federation and Russian-Chinese relations at the local and global level. She is the author of publications devoted to energy security in Asia and transborder cooperation between Russia and the Peoples Republic of China.

Dominik Mierzejewski Assistant Professor, University of Lodz. Assistant professor at the Faculty of International and Political Studies; studies at the Shanghai International Studies University (1999–2000 and 2003–2004). Internship in the Heritage Foundation (Washington D.C., 2003), Jan Karski scholarship granted by the American Center for Polish Culture (2003), postdoctoral internship at the Chinese Academy of Social Science (granted by the Polish Foundation for Science, 2010–2011), member of international organizations: Association for Asian Studies, European Association of Chinese Studies (board member) and the Chinese Association of Political Studies; member of editorial board of The Eastern Asia Studies, major interests: Chinese political system and foreign policy of the People's Republic of China (ideas, concepts, strategies and rhetoric).

Ivan Peshkov Ph.D., is a Russian-Polish social anthropologist. He has been working as an assistant professor since 2004 (the Institute of Eastern Studies, Adam Mickiewicz University) and cooperated with the Chinese Economic Association (UK). Main fields of interest: transborder studies, the Chinese-Russian relations and quasi-indigeness in Inner Asia.

Karolina Polasik-Wrzosek, Ph.D. She works at the Institute of Eastern Studies, Adam Mickiewicz University. Author of the book: Antropologiczny rekonesans historyka. Szkice o antropologii historycznej (2007). Coeditor of the work: Historia — Mentalność — Tożsamość. Studia z historii, historii historiografii i metodologii historii (2010). Her scientific interest is in methodology of the humanities, anthropology, semiotics of culture.

Tatyana N. Sorokina Candidate of History, Associate Professor of the Department of General History of Omsk F. M. Dostoevsky State University. The scope of scientific interests—the Chinese in the Far East of Russia and the Russian authorities' migration politics in the second half of 19th—the early 20th century.

Zbigniew Szmyt is a doctor of Social Anthropology, graduated at the Adam Mickiewicz University in Poznań. His scientific interest is in ethnic processes, migrations and social transformations in Inner Asia.